Stop the Insanity – the green way to print PowerPoint slides

Many of you are diligently printing the PP slides that your professors post on TWEN or other course sites. Most of these printouts consist of multiple pages of bulleted talking points on dark backgrounds that make for easy viewing in class.

Printing these, however, uses an incredible amount of toner and paper.

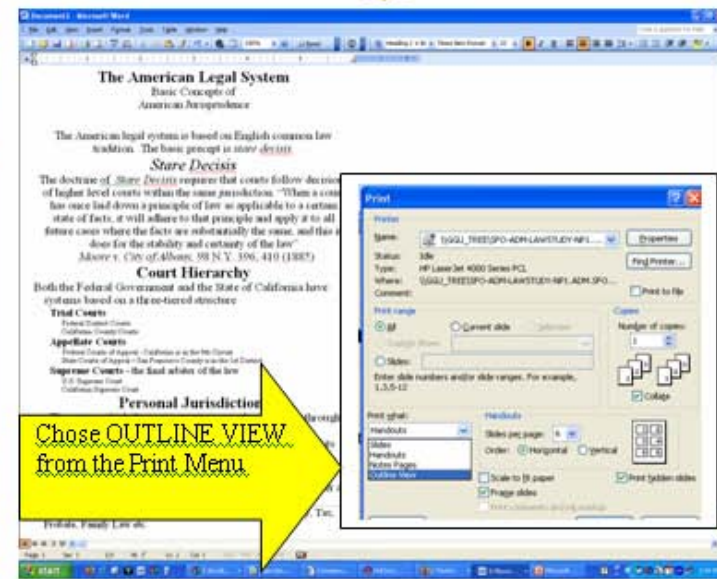

Try one of the following solutions:

1. Change the background of the show to white and the text to black, and print multiple slides per page. . .

OR

2. Print the Outline Version. This 10 slide Power Point show became a 3 page outline !!!

Please print responsibly . . .

Computer Assisted Legal Research

- Westlaw, Lexis, and Loislaw
- The Internet – fun, but not effective for your legal research assignments
- Passwords in your library packet. There are mandatory training sessions during the semester.

How to Brief a Case

This is an exercise designed to introduce first-semester law students to the basic elements of a typical case "brief" and to teach them general methodology for writing their own briefs. The exercise consists of three parts: (1) an introduction to the purposes and uses of a case brief; (2) a detailed examination of each of the ten components of a typical case brief (with examples); and (3) two actual cases that students are asked to read and then to brief, using the methodology described in this exercise. A sample brief for each of the two cases is also provided, thereby allowing students to correct and modify their briefs by way of comparison.
